Storm

Jasmine Lynds
Staff Reporter

It's late at night and tucked in my bed asleep..

The storm echoes through the house. I was by the window watching the wind blow through the trees, Listening to the thunder rumble in the sky. It was full of dark gray clouds. Suddenly, I saw a flash of lightning, It looked like it was in the front yard.

I heard my mother scream. "Why is she outside," I thought. She was asleep in her bed.

I went to look for her; I went to her room. She was not there. I ran to the living room and saw the door wide open.

I went to the door and saw my mother huddled over something. What was it?

Slowly, walking toward my mother, I heard her cry. I went to her and saw my little sister, Annia.

I burst into tears. I bent down to her, "Annia, Annia," I barley whispered.

"Mom what happened to Annia?" I asked. "I told her not to, but she did it anyway," mother said.

She looked away from me back to Annia. "All she wanted to do was feel the wind touch her face, but the lightning hit her," mother said.

She cried even harder. I saw the burn mark on Annia's left shoulder and neck.

"Vira, go down the street and get Dr. Berkley, tell him Annia got hit with lightning," mother told me.

I ran so fast to the doctor's house, two houses from ours.

I told him about Annia and he got dressed and followed me.

At our house, he picked her up and took her inside.
